In this eighth presentation for academic year 2020 of the Interagency Brown-Bag Lecture Series co-hosted by the U.S. Army Command and General Staff School and the Simons Center for Interagency Cooperation, USAID Senior Foreign Service Officer Stephanie Chetraru will lead a discussion on the Agency's role in combatting malign Kremlin influence and predatory Chinese lending around the world.

Stephanie Chetraru, the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College Distinguished Chair for Development Studies, is a commissioned Foreign Service Officer with USAID. During her 16-year career with USAID, she has served at U.S. embassies in El Salvador, Israel, Pakistan, Russia, and Moldova.

Prior to her USAID service, Chetraru was a Peace Corps volunteer in Honduras, a consultant for the think tank Inter-American Dialogue, and a community liaison for Glamis Gold/Honduras. She is a graduate of James Madison University (B.A.) and Illinois State University (M.A.). She is currently pursuing her Ph.D. in Security Studies at Kansas State University.

All lectures in this series are free and open to the public. Attendees are welcome to bring their own lunches into the conference room for the presentation.
